

AJSI

Information about authors		231-232
Social security law: what does the politics of 'conditional welfare' mean for review and client representation?	Terry Carney	233-252
The public problem of 'Aboriginal gambling': winning the struggle for an urban space	Michael Christie and Martin Young	253-272
Inheritance in Australia: family and charitable distributions from personal estates	Christopher Baker and Michael Gilding	273-289
The social impact of the global financial crisis in Australia	Peter Saunders and Melissa Wong	291-309
Indian student concerns about violence: exploring student perceptions	Fara Azmat, Angela Osborne and Ruth Rentschler	311-333
Notes for contributors		335-339

Information about authors

Fara Azmat is Senior Lecturer in the School of Management and Marketing at Deakin University. Her research interest focuses on internationalisation of higher education, social inclusion and issues of social responsibility, within the framework of sustainability.

Christopher Baker is Research Fellow, Asia-Pacific Centre for Social Investment and Philanthropy, Faculty of Business and Enterprise, Swinburne University of Technology. His current research interests include charitable giving from personal estates, diaspora giving patterns, and high net worth philanthropy.

Terry Carney is a Professor in the Faculty of Law at the University of Sydney, specialising in welfare law. A past chair of peak bodies such as the National Council on Social Welfare and the Australian Institute of Family Studies, and author of several books and over 150 papers, his most recent publication is Australian Mental Health Tribunals: Space for Fairness, Freedom, Protection and Treatment? (with David Tait, Julia Perry, Alikki Vernon and Fleur Beaupert, 2011, Themis Press, an imprint of Federation Press).

Michael Christie worked as a linguist in north east Arnhem Land Aboriginal communities for twenty years before moving to Darwin to set up the Yolŋu studies teaching program at Charles Darwin University. He is currently Professor of Education, and involved in collaborative and multidisciplinary research with Yolŋu knowledge authorities.

Michael Gilding is Professor of Sociology at Swinburne Institute for Social Research, Swinburne University of Technology. His current research interests include succession planning in family businesses, inheritance taxes in comparative perspective, and the mobilisation around mining taxes in Australia.

Angela Osborne is a researcher at Deakin and LaTrobe universities. Her varied research interests include linguistics, media, and diversity.

Ruth Rentschler is Professor and Chair of Academic Board, and Chair in Arts and Entertainment Management at Deakin University. Her research interests are in diversity.

Peter Saunders holds a Research Chair in the Social Policy Research Centre at the University of New South Wales and was the Centre's Director between 1987 and 2007. He is currently the President of the Australian Social Policy Association (ASPA).

Melissa Wong is a Research Associate at the Social Policy Research Centre, University of New South Wales. Her research interests include the measurements of poverty, deprivation and social exclusion, child wellbeing indicators and developing economies.

Martin Young is a Senior Lecturer within the Centre for Gambling Education and Research (CGER), at Southern Cross University. Prior to taking up this position in March 2011, he led the Northern Territory gambling research program. His current interests include spatial and behavioural approaches to gambling management in remote areas, viewed through the theoretical lenses of critical and radical geography.