The AUSTRALIAN JOURNAL OF SOCIAL ISSUES is published by the Australian Social Policy Association to provide an inter-disciplinary forum for debate on significant social policy issues. It deals with questions of social justice and social policy. Articles discuss particular social issues, review conceptual problems, present empirical studies and debate policy alternatives. The journal is editorially independent of the Association and the universities to which editors and contributors are affiliated.
AJSI is a fully peer reviewed journal, indexed in the Social Sciences Citation Index (SSCI), ISI Thomson Scientific Index and by the Australian Public Affairs Information Service (APAIS).

All editorial matters should be directed to: ajsi@aspa.org.au

Publisher
The Australian Journal of Social Issues is published by the Australian Social Policy Association (ASPA). Subscriptions enquiries should be directed to publications@aspa.org.au.

Volumes 1-45 of the Journal were published by the Australian Council of Social Service (ACOSS). Volume 46 and volume 47, numbers 1 and 2, were published by ACOSS in collaboration with ASPA.

Copyright
This publication is copyright. Apart from fair dealing for the purpose of private study, research, criticism, or review, as permitted under the Copyright Act, persons and organisations wanting to reproduce material may obtain written permission from the publisher. Enquiries should be addressed to publications@aspa.org.au.

ISSN 0157-6321
Copyediting by textedit.com.au
Layout and typesetting by artmachine.com.au
Printing by Canprint

Australian Social Policy Association
The Australian Social Policy Association (ASPA) is a non-profit organisation and professional association of social policy researchers, educators, practitioners and policy-makers. ASPA promotes debate and increased understanding of social policy in Australia, and productive collaborations between those working and researching in social policy locally, across the Asia-Pacific region and internationally.

The Association provides its members with access to:
- publications,
- seminars,
- workshops and conferences,
- cross-sectoral networking opportunities,
- higher degree research forums and networks.

ASPA seeks to support the community of social policy researchers and policy makers in their efforts to understand and contribute to the promotion of human well-being.
Social inclusion in Australia – what has it achieved?

Gerry Redmond
115-117

The social inclusion policy agenda in Australia: a case of old wine, new bottles?

Greg Marston and Mike Dee
119-138

Social inclusion, exclusion, and well-being in Australia: meaning and measurement

Peter Saunders
139-158

Social inclusion under Labor in South Australia

Lou Wilson and John Spoehr
159-170

Policy approaches to addressing Aboriginal social inclusion in South Australia

Jane Robbins
171-189

Disability policy in Australia: a triumph of the scriptio inferior on impotence and neediness?

Lorna Hallahan
191-208

Information about authors
209-210

Notes for contributors
211-214
Information about authors

Mike Dee was a youth worker in Kings Cross and Earls Court, London, in 1976 and has more than twenty years’ direct experience working with children, young people, families and communities. At QUT Mike completed his PhD in 2008 on the topic of Young People, Public Space and Citizenship. His research interests include the study of citizenship, the welfare state, social determinants of health, CCTV and other forms of surveillance, urban public space, and children and young people’s rights.

Lorna Hallahan is Associate Professor, Head of Discipline Social Work, and Chair, Social and Behavioural Research Ethics Committee at Flinders University. She was Deputy Chair of the National People with Disability and Carers Council from 2008–13 and member of the National NDIS Advisory Committee from 2010–13. Lorna is a Chief Investigator on the Evaluation of the NDIS. As a member of the SA Social Inclusion Board she guided the development of Strong Voices, a Blueprint for Disability Policy (2011).

Greg Marston is Professor of Social Policy in the School of Public Health and Social Work, QUT. His research interests focus on welfare state restructuring, poverty, and social policy governance. His latest book with Catherine McDonald and Lois Bryson is The Australian Welfare State: Who Benefits Now? Palgrave Macmillan, Melbourne.

Gerry Redmond is Associate Professor at the School of Social and Policy Studies, Flinders University, Adelaide. His research interests encompass child development, child poverty and deprivation, inequalities between children, and how these evolve through time. He is currently leading a national study of child wellbeing (the Australian Child Wellbeing Project) that is using child-centred techniques to measure differences and inequalities in wellbeing among Australian children in their middle years.

Jane Robbins is Associate Professor in the Discipline of Politics and Policy Studies in the School of Social and Policy Studies, Flinders University. She teaches social policy and Indigenous policy at undergraduate and postgraduate levels.

Peter Saunders was the Director of the Social Policy Research Centre (SPRC) at the University of New South Wales between February 1987 and July 2007, and now holds a Research Chair in Social Policy within the Centre. He was elected a Fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia in 1995, was President of the Australian Social Policy Association between 2009 and 2012 and is currently President of the Foundation for International Studies on Social Security (FISS).

John Spoehr is the Executive Director of the Australian Workplace Innovation and Social Research Centre, The University of Adelaide where he is an Associate Professor. He is the editor of ‘State of South Australia’, now in its third edition and has published widely on politics and economics in Australia. His current research focuses on the impact of the closure of the Australian automobile manufacturing industry with a significant focus on industrial rejuvenation and urban regeneration strategies.

Lou Wilson is a Senior Lecturer at the University of South Australia. He maintains research interests in social inclusion and cohesion, social capital, and social, economic and environmental sustainability. He has recently published research on ‘Urban Consolidation and the Health of Australian Children’. He currently teaches courses in planning research study and social planning, with teaching interests in social policy, politics and sociology, survey design, and focus group methods.