Information about authors

Margaret Alston, OAM is Professor and Head of Department of Social Work at Monash University where she also leads the Gender, Leadership and Social Sustainability research unit. From 2008–14 she headed the Australian Council of heads of Schools of Social Work. She has published widely in the field of social work, gender, climate change and disasters.

Keith Jacobs is an Australian Research Council Future Fellow based in the School of Social Sciences, University of Tasmania. He is a member of the editorial board of the journal Housing Studies and the international advisory boards of Housing Theory and Society and International Journal of Housing Policy. He is currently working on a monograph for Reaktion Press titled Housing: A Post War History.

Peter Saunders currently holds a Research Chair in the Social Policy Research Centre, University of New South Wales. His research interests include poverty and inequality, household needs and living standards, social exclusion, social security reform and comparative social policy. His recent research has focused on the measurement of poverty and inequality, and identifying deprivation and social exclusion in Australia. He was elected a Fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia in 1995, was President of the Australian Social Policy Association between 2009 and 2012 and is currently President of the Foundation for International Studies on Social Security (FISS).

Kevin Schnepel is a Lecturer in the School of Economics at The University of Sydney. His research examining the relationship between labour market opportunities and recidivism was sponsored by the United States Bureau of Justice Statistics and the American Statistical Association. He is currently working on several other projects that analyse the impacts of such factors as public assistance programs and environmental health issues on criminal behaviour.

Maggie Walter, a member of the Briggs/Johnson family, descends from the pairrebeenne people of North Eastern Tasmania, and is Pro Vice-Chancellor Aboriginal Research and Leadership and Professor of Sociology at the University of Tasmania. She publishes in the fields of race relations, Indigenous family and Indigenous research methodologies. Recent publications include Indigenous statistics: a quantitative methodology (with Chris Andersen, University of Alberta, Left Coast Press, 2013) and the second edition of Social Inequality in Australia (with Daphne Habibis, Oxford University Press, 2014).

Don Weatherburn is Director of the NSW Bureau of Crime Statistics and Research. He is also an Adjunct Professor in the School of Social Science and Policy at the University of New South Wales and a fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences in Australia. He has published on a wide range of topics, including offender rehabilitation, deterrence, drug policy, and the impact of economic and social stress on parenting.

The AUSTRALIAN JOURNAL OF SOCIAL ISSUES is published by the Australian Social Policy Association to provide an inter-disciplinary forum for debate on significant social policy issues. It deals with questions of social justice and social policy. Articles discuss particular social issues, review conceptual problems, present empirical studies and debate policy alternatives. The journal is editorially independent of the Association and the universities to which editors and contributors are affiliated.
